

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

EX LIBRIS

Dr. J. P. Gro
Ac
Da

Y.
45
258
a

7
A
S
S
E
S
S
M
E
N
T
S

WARREN SUMNER BARLOW

Warren Sumner Barlow

IMMORTALITY

INHERENT IN NATURE.

BY

WARREN SUMNER BARLOW,

AUTHOR OF "THE VOICES," AND OTHER POEMS.

One chain of causes and effects
Encircles Nature's vast domain;
One universal voice proclaims
All is, and ever will remain.

See Canto 5th, 6th Verse.

"All are but parts of one stupendous whole
Whose body Nature is, and God the soul."

—POPE.

NEW YORK:
FOWLER & WELLS CO.,
753 BROADWAY.
1885.

953
P2581
v

COPYRIGHT BY
WARREN SUMNER BARLOW,
1885.

TO THE ABBOTTS

TROWB
PRINTING AND BOOKBINDING COMPANY,
NEW YORK.

6

To those who doubt immortal life,
And feed upon the husks of fate ;
Who dare not trust their fondest hopes,
These lines in love we dedicate.

M191823

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
"GOD IS ALL IN ALL,"	7
CANTO I.
THE SOURCE OF THOUGHT IS ETERNAL,	12
CANTO II.
ALL EFFECTS ARE ETERNAL,	17
CANTO III.
FOREORDINATION IN HARMONY WITH FREE AGENCY,	20
CANTO IV.
DESIGN VERSUS CHANCE,	29
CANTO V.
HOPE OF THE SOUL,	37

IMMORTALITY.

“GOD IS ALL IN ALL.”

ETERNAL Father—Life Divine,
Thou boundless Evermore ;
O teach this feeble erring soul
Thy goodness to adore.

Thy watchful care with unseen hands
Moulds and directs the whole,
While universal order reigns
By Thy divine control.

THE ALPHABET

8

IMMORTALITY.

The music of the rolling spheres,
Attuned and held by Thee,
Forever thrills the universe
With silent harmony.

Unnumbered families of worlds
Their yearly circuits run,
While borne upon the wings of light
Around their parent sun.

Athwart the heaven's ethereal dome,
Where angel feet have trod,
The panorama brings to light
The alphabet of God.

All Nature speaks with countless tongues
The language of each sphere,
Whose voice of harmony is heard
By every list'ning ear.

And though we fail to comprehend
The earth's minutest grains,
The central heart of Nature lives
And flows in all their veins.

O who can fathom Nature's depths,
Or trace her trackless rounds,
Whose secret seals their vigils keep,
Unknown by lines or bounds?

A fraction of Infinitude
If measured or defined,
Would circumscribe the boundless realms
Of the Eternal Mind.

All central, no circumference,
If Nature hath no bounds;
She neither can be more, nor less,
In her unending rounds.

Thus with Infinitude of life,
Whose life "is all in all;"
If death annihilates a part,
Omnipotence may fall.

But God—the universal Life—
His life to all secures,
Which must extend to all extent,
While God Himself endures.

His boundless being binds the whole,
That all, His life may share;
Encircled in His arms of love,
All feel His tender care.

One life embodied in all forms;
One limitless control;
One chain of many golden links,
Unites and binds the whole.

One universal law of love
Is seen in all we trace ;
One vast Infinitude is held
By God's divine embrace.

O Thou unknown, yet known to all ;
Though found, art ever sought ;
We feel Thou art the central source
Of Being, Life, and Thought !

CANTO I.

THE SOURCE OF THOUGHT IS ETERNAL .

Think not that conscious souls will sleep
Forever in a dreamless night ;
While matter gross forever lives,
And moves in pleasant paths of light.

As rivers, with resistless force,
All carve their pathway to the sea ;
So restless man forever yearns
For blissful immortality.

Unlike the rivers ocean bound,
Which mingle in the rolling strife,
The souls that flood the stream of time,
Forever crave a conscious life.

The aspirations of the soul
Are living germs that will mature ;
And fondest hopes are promises
Of golden fruitage, made secure.

The rocks that held all forms of life,
In their primeval solitude,
Have clothed the earth in rich attire,
In every zone and longitude.

Their massive brows, long turned to dust,
Display their type on nature's page ;
Whose precious gems, unscathed by time,
Outlive all forms from age to age.

The diamond, with its eyes of fire,
Beholds its kindred forms decay ;
In youthful vigor, undefiled,
It lives while ages wend their way.

Then must the germs of life and thought
Commingle with a senseless clod,
While inborn Hope for endless years
Is thus a counterpart of God ?

If transient rocks contain a gem
That lives while forms that held it fall,
May not our throbbing heart-strings hold
A prize more precious far than all ?

If conscious memory outlives
Each mortal form, of seven years span,
And holds the record of them all,
Why not survive the age of man ?

The answer lives in every soul,
Responsive to our heart's desires,
For on Love's altar Hope was born,
And kindled her eternal fires.

Can being doubt its end and aim,
Whose thoughts have lived from age to age,
And will survive the flight of time,
On memory's immortal page ?

Can thus a feeble, fleeting soul—
The short-lived tenant of the earth,
With hopes like bubbles, soon to burst,
To an immortal thought give birth ?

If thus Effect outweighs its Cause,
The "Great First Cause," in dread alarm,
Beholding now His waning power,
May yield His weak and palsied arm.

If Cause doth not survive Effect,
Or bows submissive to its call,
All thought and substance, left to chance,
To chaos soon must fade and fall.

When Time turns back his dial-plate,
And Nature countermands her laws,
And Darkness craves the beams of light,
Effects may triumph over Cause.

Till then, the source of thought will live,
And still retain its life divine,
Where age adorns immortal youth,
As conscious souls more brightly shine.

A trio of eternities,
The present, future, and the past,
Will bear us on their central waves,
And doubly crown our hopes at last!

CANTO II.

ALL EFFECTS ARE ETERNAL.

Cause proclaims its changeless purpose
In the language of Effects,
Universal and eternal,
Which the universe reflects.

Interwoven through the ages,
All Effects must ever last ;
Hold the present, shape the future,
Crown with glory all the past.

From all star-lit constellations,
To the mote which naught detects,
All, except the Cause of Causes,
Lives forever in Effects.

Then, must conscious life and being
Languish on the verge of thought,
Strangle every aspiration,
And forever come to naught ?

Must the soul, that crowns creation—
Essence of immortal truth—
Grand Effect above all others,
Not survive its wayward youth ?

When unending space is bounded,
And all systems come to naught,
And eternity no longer
Bears the record of a thought,

Then Effect, devoid of being,
Cause may nevermore rehearse
The Eternal Power and Wisdom
That ordained the universe.

But Effect will ride forever
In the chariot of Cause
Driven by inherent forces,
Guided by unerring laws.

Cradled in the mist of ages,
Borne upon the breath of time,
Man will reach, through love and wisdom,
An immortal height sublime.

CANTO III.

FOREORDINATION IN HARMONY WITH FREE AGENCY.

To doubt Effect, we question God,
With all his attributes divine,
Whose rays of wisdom, truth and love,
On all his works forever shine.

Cause must determine all Effects,
And Love obeys its wise behest ;
Then, as the "Great First Cause" directs,
All are, and ever will be, blest.

Free Agency and Sovereignty

Are partners in a common cause,
To elevate immortal man,
Through knowledge of unchanging laws.

But every soul is free to act,
Within the circuit of its sphere ;
Where all, in Nature's ample school,
Will learn God's purpose to revere.

And man alone of all the tribes
That tread the earth, or beat the air,
Is born with freedom's armor on,
And must life's conflicts ever share.

His sphere of freedom, though defined
By walls that limit self-control,
Will widen and extend its bounds,
As wisdom doth expand the soul.

But for the tribes below mankind,
 Instinctive wisdom holds the reins,
And safely guides and governs all,
 By laws that bind them with its chains.

The countless beasts that roam the fields,
 And quench their thirst from laughing rills,
Select from earth's extended plains,
 The food their nature best distills.

The birds are made to build their nests,
 The first as perfect as the last ;
To swell their breasts with cheerful song,
 The changeless song of ages past.

The bee invites us to behold
 The wonders of its matchless skill ;
No hand can mould its waxen cups,
 Much less from flow'ry petals fill.

The spider spins and weaves its web,
Each strand with almost countless threads,
Whose lines by genius are defined,
On which it mounts and safely treads.

The ant a lesson gives to all,
Of patience, industry, and care ;
The insects of the vasty deep,
That plant the coral mountains there,

Proclaim, with all the instinct tribes,
In language man may understand,
That wise design pervades the whole—
That power divine is in command.

Thus all these tribes are wisely led
By hands unseen the world around,
No path diverging turns their course,
No bar to intercept is found.

Like plants and trees, they come and go,
Like grass and flowers, they fade and die,
Yet leave their problems still unsolved,
Which none can fathom or deny.

But man at birth is weak and frail—
A helpless, thankless, hopeless soul,
Yet reason holds a gift divine—
The power to rise, through self-control.

Though far more helpless than the brute,
He holds within his baby hand
The golden keys that will unlock
The choicest treasures of the land.

Thus man alone, of all the earth,
By God endowed is thus made free;
That through the endless rounds of life,
He may himself, forever be.

Forever learning, yet unlearned ;
 Forever rising, still to rise ;
Forever living, still to live
 Where naught but pain and sorrow dies.

This power of choice, bequeathed to man
 By God's immutable decree,
As part of His revokeless plan,
 Is lasting as eternity.

To limit freedom to this life,
 Eternal problems to rehearse,
Then chain us to the wheels of fate,
 And march us through the universe.

Revokes the purposes of God,
 And limits law to time and place ;
Forever bars the doors of hope,
 And ends the progress of the race.

Progression is our end and aim,
Revokeless as the days and years ;
Unlimited by wisdom's ways,
Eternal as the rolling spheres.

In this progressive school, the soul
In search of happiness, will learn
In time, or in eternity,
To choose the right, the wrong to spurn.

The penalties that lie in wait
For all who ever go astray
Are danger-signals in our path,
To turn us from the downward way,

Until our dormant souls arouse,
By Love's divine, chastising hand ;
Imparting lessons all must heed,
And cannot fail to understand.

But Love invites us to explore
The beauties of her chosen way ;
Where all, by Wisdom's holy light,
Will learn her precepts to obey.

The restless freedom of the soul,
Though shores define its inland sea,
Will span the narrow bounds of time,
To oceans of eternity.

Free Agency and Sovereignty,
So nurture and direct the mind,
That knowledge, through experience,
Will crown with glory all mankind.

Thus all will rise by force of will—
Free agent of our dormant powers ;
Inspired by Courage, led by Hope,
It guides us through our darkest hours,

Until, triumphant, every soul
Will harmonize with Nature's laws—
The standard of the universe ;
Whose author, is the "Great First Cause."

O Source of wisdom, truth, and love,
Teach us Thy precepts to obey,
That we may not retard our flight
By errors that beset the way.

CANTO IV.

DESIGN VERSUS CHANCE.

Design—primordial of law—

The universal foe to chance—

The thought, that moulds and guides the whole,

Is fashioned by omnipotence.

Unnumbered voices all proclaim,

Through Wisdom, Truth, and Love Divine,

That restless, tireless, endless spheres,

Are all propelled through wise design,

Design, must have a primal source,
As all effects must follow cause ;
And he who doubts these golden rules.
Must question well-established laws.

Our mortal forms inwrought with care,
Each part adapted to the whole,
Dispel the very dreams of Chance,
And glorify divine control.

But should disease and early death
Extend their cold, relentless hands,
And leave us lonely in our grief,
By breaking love's unsullied bands,

We might in sorrow, grief and pain
Almost disown the power supreme,
And, with a vague, bewildered sense,
Behold in all an empty dream.

But if our vision could expand,
And view the breadth of Nature's rule,
We might conclude too oft we were
Rebellious pupils from her school.

All pain or death, not crowned with age,
Are accidents in life's career—
Are shoals adown the stream of time,
Which all avoid who safely steer.

To entertain unholy thoughts
And clothe them with their kindred deeds,
We crush the budding flowers of hope,
And cultivate pernicious weeds.

Immutable are Nature's laws,
Regardless of our weal or woe,
And though we scatter tares or wheat,
"We must all gather what we sow."

Thus Justice poises every deed,
 Though men, or nations, rise or fall,
And Time will vindicate the truth
 That love divine is all in all.

If naught creates, controls, presides,
 The being, end, and aim of man
Are but the vague behests of Chance,
 Devoid of purpose, thought or plan.

And Nature, with reluctant hands,
 Her treasures undirected yields ;
While Hope invites us to regale
 On barren and forbidden fields.

If Law were severed from Design,
 Chaotic worlds, in wild affright,
Would dim the battlements of time,
 And shroud infinitude with night.

I fain, with homely reverie,
Would, by a simple thought, explain
That which my oft-bewildered pen
May here disguise in its refrain.

Were billiards played without design,
Its balls by law, through Chance would roll,
Such heedless Chance, in vague command,
Would send confusion through the whole.

But let Design enforce the law,
As skilful hands direct the play,
And law, no longer ruled by Chance,
No ball need ever go astray.

Thus Nature heeds the silent power,
That through infinitude abounds,
Where wise Design controls the law
That swings all systems in their rounds.

Through trackless paths their measured flight
Is guided by unerring skill ;
As moments counted will define
The time and place that each must fill ;

While weary thought without a poise,
To take the burden from her wings,
In search of chaos, Chance, or bounds,
Returning message never brings.

Through Nature's vast unsolved domain,
The crowning purpose of the whole,
The life, for which all else was made,
Is centred in the human soul.

Design—the central source of power—
The thought that fashions every plan—
The crowning jewel of the soul,
Is only found in God, and man.

Design hath bridged from shore to shore
The dark veiled chasm of despair,
On which immortal life hath reared
Her temple so divinely fair.

Though nurtured in the dusty garb
Of time's unsought, unsolved career,
Yet, with Jehovah's Fatherhood,
Why grope in darkness, doubt, and fear ?

As this our sun gave birth to worlds,
From which our system was set free,
All fashioned from his elements,
Eternal in their entity ;

So hath the central Source of thought,
From all its attributes divine,
Bequeathed immortal life to man,
To crown with glory all Design.

O who can comprehend the power
That poises systems in their flight,
That holds creation in its hands,
And floods the universe with light ?

Yet all this wond'rous power is Love,
Portrayed in one stupendous plan,
In one expression, all expressed—
Eternal happiness for man.

O Father, in whose love we live,
Whose life in all is love divine,
We would obey Thy holy will,
And glorify Thy wise design.

CANTO V.

HOPE OF THE SOUL.

Sweet Hope, thy star will yet adorn
The zenith of a cloudless sky,
Whose bright effulgence never wanes,
Whose aspirations never die.

Eternal progress rends the veil,
And gives to Reason ample scope,
Whose massive brow, and measured step,
Is ballast to the wings of Hope.

Each soul a finite god will rise
Majestic in its entity ;
Maturing by its inborn strength,
Coeval with Eternity.

Shall forms of dust that clothe the soul
Outlive a thought that moves the world,
That times the circuit of the spheres
Which through infinitude are whirled ?

Nay, man, thy noble end and aim
Are not disarmed by feeble dust ;
Then give Inspiring Hope her wings,
For while God lives, in Him we must.

One chain of Causes and Effects
Encircles Nature's vast domain ;
One universal voice proclaims,
All is, and ever will remain !

"THE VOICES,"

BY WARREN SUMNER BARLOW.

This work of nearly 300 pages (price $1.00) has now reached its eleventh edition.

TESTIMONIALS.

From the many critical notices and reviews of "The Voices," we have only room for a few brief extracts:

Judge Baker, of New York, in his elaborate review of "The Voices," says: "Considered in the light of a controversial or didactic poem, it is without an equal in contemporaneous literature—the birth of an audacious mind, and is destined to excite greater and more wide-encircling waves of sectarian agitation than any anti-credal work ever published."

Professor S. B. Brittan, in his able review of the work, says: "In 'The Voice of Nature' the author gives us a clearer insight into his own views of the material world, of human nature and

God. He has a rational philosophy of the relations of mind and matter, and his theology is at once natural and charitable. He recognizes one God everywhere, present alike in the physical world and in His moral universe. The God he adores, and his strong faith in the goodness that rules the world, are clearly revealed and forcibly expressed in the following paraphrastic and poetical rendering of a beautiful passage in the Sermon on the Mount:

“ Will He who hears the ravens when they cry,
 Mock and deride thee when no hope is nigh?
 Will he who clothes the lilies of the field,
 That neither toil, nor spin, nor raiment yield;
 Who feeds the fowls that never reap nor sow—
 Extends His watchful care where'er they go;
 Will He who clothes the grass which is to-day,
 While all its beauty quickly fades away,
 Forget His image—His immortal child?
 Is he alone derided and defiled,
 Or left to tread the downward thoroughfare,
 With Satan to bewilder and ensnare,
 And urge him on to death and dark despair?
 ‘ O, ye of little faith,’ let reason sway:
 Are not your souls more precious far than they? ”

William H. Burleigh, a well-known author and poet, in one of his contributions to the Chicago Evening Post, thus speaks of the author, and “The Voices:” “That he is a bold, earnest man, with very pronounced opinions, that he has a combative and incisive way of stating those opinions, and that, below all seeming antagonism to the letter of old creeds, he accepts the spirit of the new dispensation, his book furnishes abundant evidence. His verse is generally characterized by vigor, and at times glides with a true rhythmic flow, and rings with a genuine poetic harmony.”

117783-12100

M191823

953
B2585

Barlow, Warren S.
Immortality inherent in nature

i

M191823

953

B2585

i

THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY

14 DAY USE
RETURN TO DESK FROM WHICH BORROWED
LOAN DEPT.

RENEWALS ONLY—TEL. NO. 642-3405

This book is due on the last date stamped below, or on the date to which renewed.

Renewed books are subject to immediate recall.

DEC 11 1968 24

RECEIVED

DEC 2 '68 -4 PM

LOAN DEPT.

MAY 13 1977

REC. CIB. MAY 7 77

LD 21A-38m-5,'68
(J401s10)476B

General Library
University of California
Berkeley

CHAP. 366.

AN ACT in regard to public libraries incorporated in the State of New York.

PASSED April 23, 1870.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. If any officer, clerk, agent, or member of any public library duly incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, OR ANY OTHER PERSON WHATSOEVER, shall hereafter willfully CUT, MARK, MUTILATE, or otherwise INjure any book, volume, map, chart, painting or engraving belonging to any public library so incorporated as aforesaid, or procure such injury to be done as herein stated, every such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof by any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be liable for each offense to a fine of not more than ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS, at the discretion of the court.